

Wooden mallet: it is a striking tool which is made up of wood and is frequently used to give light blows to tools having wooden handle like chisel.

Fishtail Chisel: It is used by hand pressure or with a mallet for cutting square recess in wooden pieces. It has a flat blade of 5 to 25mm width & 125mm length. The end is bevelled to form a cutting edge.

Dove tail Chisel: has a back to ensure finishing of sharp corners like dovetail joints. Used to create & clean out dovetails.

Mortise Chisel: used for heavy & deep cuts. Its thickness is 6-15mm and is stronger than other chisels.

Gouge Chisel: It has a hollow curved blade provided for finishing curved surfaces (carving).

Marking Gauge: consists of long wooden bar of square cross section with slightly curved side faces on which a piece of wood moves. Long wooden pin bar is provided with a marking pin face of the sliding piece remains in contact with job being marked.

Try Square: consists of steel blade fitted in a wooden/metallic stock at 90°. Graduated in mm/inches. Used for measuring flatness of surface.

Inside Calliper: measures distance between two opposite open objects. measures internal (diameters) size.

Outside Calliper: measure external of an object. made of high carbon steel. high degree of accuracy.

Divider: A diameter calliper is used as divider. used for marking circles. Ends are sharp so that one of the legs can be fixed & other can be moved.

Teacher's Signature _____